Probable Adjournment on Monday.

The House having passed the greater and and the lesser judicial appropriation bills, the latter, with the objectionable legislation of former bills as a rider, and the majority in the Senate being forbidden by the caucus from amending the bill, there is a fair prospect that that body will pass the lesser bill to-day, hav ing disposed of the other vesterday. Should this be done it is probable that Mr. Davis will report favorably the House resolution for ad-journment at four p. m. on Monday. If the marsbals' bill reaches the President to-day this marsbals bill reaches the President to-day this will afford bim time to send in a veto message, which will be brief, inasmuch as the same bill has once before been vetoed by him. It appears that the Democrats intend to go home without making any provision for the pay of the marshals. Should this be done it is altogether probable that the President, looking to the interests of the whole people, will choose the lesser of two evils and not call Congress together again, as he would be warranted in doing. The country will suffer less by the suspension of the courts than by the paralyzation of business produced by the presence of Congress at the Capital. So it appears that, as there is no business to hold Congress together, an adjournment on Monday is probable.

The Timber Depredators.

The fact having been brought to the attention of the Interior Department that many parties who have illegally cut wood from the public lands in the different Territories are desirous of relieving themselves from the liability attached to such offense by paying for the wood cut, the Commissioner of the General Land-Office has issued a circular to his registers and receivers in the Territories to accept the compromise for depredations prior to June 17, 1879. The terms are to be one-half cent for every railroad the cut, fifty cents for every gord of wood, and $1 for every thousand feet of logs. As a condition precedent every person seeking settlement on these terms shall submit a sworm statement of the kind and quantity of fore parties of the report, and has acted always to that end, against the wishes of his party and the public. In committee Mr. Glover claims that one week's delay was caused by a demand to know the probable cost of printing. A still further delay of a month resulted, Mr. Glover says, by a demand that the report and evidence be turned over to Mr. Singleton's committee, which in his (Glover's) estimation was not entitled to it, Mr. Glover further charges Mr. Singleton with having treated him with great discourtesy on repeated occessions. He reminds Mr. Singleton what each claim was not entitled to it, Mr. Glover further charges Mr. Singleton with a bandoning the demand for its production because of the General treatment of the kind and quantity of the report, and has acted always to that end, against the wishes of his party and the public. mill of Alpheus Wilt & Son, which has a frontige on the east side of Front street, above Fairmount avenue, from No. 711 to 723 inclusive. One house, situated in a rear court, was actually razed to the ground, so that a stranger would hardly conjecture its previous existence, while in the ruins beneath were baried a whole family. In another house an following is the score : end of the boiler had shot through the brick wan and lodged itself on the second floor, and so demolished everything that all evidence of habitation, except the house itself, was absolutely extinct. The scene directly after the explosion was heartrending, the air was laden with dust and vapor, and men, women, and children were running in every direction. The explosion occurred, according to all accounts, just about a quarter before eight o'clock. As is customary in planing mills, the furncess were fired with shavings, which necessitates a firing-up about every fifteen minutes.

The engineer, Michael Dietel, had just fired up, and was sitting in the engine-house, reading a newspaper, directly in front of the end of the boiler which blew out, and was hurled, with the huge piece of iron, across Court A. through the arm of the second floor, and substitute of the second floor.

There are various rumors in regard to the cause of the disaster, among which was that the engineer had said a day or two ago that he had notified the proprietors to stop running the boilers, as they were unsafe. This, however, is disproved, as a certificate of the Hartford Steam Botler Inspection and Insurance Company, dated February 11, 1879, certifies that the boilers were all right; and as late as May 14 the boilers had been examined and were guaranteed to stand ninety pounds' pres-sure, to which, however, they had never been subjected, although that amount of steam could be carried with perfect safety.
